♦ DA Document ♦

Summary / Explanation:

Da has quite a few issues that I wish to bring to light. Some are more concerning than others, going as far as lolicon and racism. It is no secret that smaller tweets and even comments that say negative things about it are sought out and contested. However, here is proof to the claims.Many of the evidence seen here was sent to me by my own friends, who wish for the same things I do. I won't lie, but the DAseverwild acc did somewhat inspire me. To a certain extent, it happened to highlight some issues in the server, but through a comedic lens. I decided to take a more critical approach and use this as a way to (hopefully) improve the community as a whole. This is not being done out of malice nor does this set out to cause harm, but the community deserves better.

!!!Content Warning!!!

Mentions of rape/sexual assault, suicide and death, (child) pornography, racism, use of slurs (n-word, f-slur, r-slur, etc), nazi-symbolism, descriptions of traumatic situations, violence, mental disorders, manipulation, ableism, child abuse.

Table of Contents:

Broken promises:
Audience control:
Will's Unwarranted Trauma Dumps:
General status and power abuse:
Mistreatment of fans and fan artists:
Emotional manipulation:
Disregard of safety and oversharing private info:
Ableism, sexism, racism, victim blaming, use of slurs and other strange things:
Porn, NSFW and lolicon:
Conclusion:

This table of contents allows you to go directly to any parts you'd like to read, that way you can avoid subjects you deem triggering.
Note that none of the images and conversations have been censored, only the usernames of people outside of the DAGames team and non-public figures have been redacted. In discord chats we use a color system for this:

- White indicates a regular server member.
- Green indicates a friend of DA.
- Pink indicates a lower rank moderator.
- Blue indicates a head moderator.

Broken promises:

Will and the DAcrew by a certain extension, have a habit of promising certain plans, only to never follow through with them. Often by quietly fizzling them out. The earliest example of this was the supposed fnaf fan game ‘five miles under’ they were working on. This game would never be released, and would be quietly forgotten. Another example of this would be the multiple times stream and video schedules would be made, only for them to be followed for a short amount of time. The canceled game development team Beyond Ether is another example of this, showing once again Will having big plans that never come to fruition.

I've gotten a few comments from people saying "You're just doing this for the fame and the money". So I'm posing two challenges:
1. I will make a horrible video that sends away thousands of people
2. Donate $5000 to a charity stream when available.

I'm removing most of any teaser we've got for the campaign and forgetting they ever happened. It is imperative we keep most things under wraps, and my mental state isn't capable of handling such high volume pressures.
Who would've thought, being trigger happy AND reatrained.

The last hour gave back my old PTSD fevers and had shivers down my spine. Not myself when this stuff happens and barely know what I'm doing when under that amount of mental strain. It's like I'm not even me anymore.
It's imperative to keep that in check first and foremost.

Fig1:

Beyond Ether: a gaming company Will had planned, much similar to the original use of biobond, that unfortunately wouldn’t create anything. This isn’t a preface to Hammerscorn as this was over 6 years prior to it and Pandorium.

Fig2:

Donation challenge: other than the tweet there hasn’t been any proof that this donation occurred, same goes for any other donations Will talks about. The video mentioned doesn't exist either.

Fig3:

Removing the JOD teasers: At some point there was a chance JOD wouldn’t occur at all because Will allegedly couldn’t handle the pressure of a project this size.

Audience control:

Fundamentally, controlling one's audience isn’t inherently a negative thing. However, what matters is the manner that it is done. Multiple times the audience is either controlled by guilt tripping or by passive aggressive means. For example: a try not to laugh challenge, Will accuses his audience of not having a good sense of humor and that nothing they sent was funny. Another time, a fan had posted their translation for the nadorian language, only to be sent multiple paragraphs on both twitter and discord about why they need to be careful with their wording. The wording in question? Saying they solved the language instead of theorizing it. Another notable one is when a Garten of Banban parody song was encouraged to be taken down,because fans of it had made comments about liking the old DA more. This wasn’t the creators saying this, but just a few fans of the song.

It's sorta cool, however we have large suspicions on is structural integrity, and how jarringly close it is to the original, and also how it was exported the way it was.

Plus we know who you are and where you are with the group that you've tagged along with in a specific clan, so forgive us when we say we're extreeeeeemely suspicious.
Also we have extreme suspicions based on the image above as well
Notice how it has artifacts that couldn't have been possible without the pre-existing layers to work with, and some of those blemishes seem oddly telling that the existing images were needed.
Which means there's only one way these could've have been done. By accessing our files, a.k.a hacking us.

The fact you can associate with these people clearly demonstrates there's a connection and there's talks.
The fact you kept it silent and out of the way leads on more suspicion.

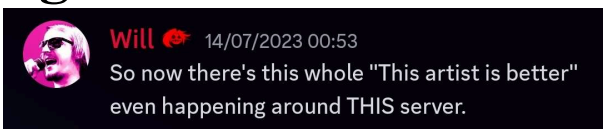

Fig4:

After someone posted a high quality meme of the Ambush cover, Will became paranoid and began to accuse them of stealing it by supposedly hacking his computer. The main issue here is that he accuses this person of being in a ‘cult’ because they shared the same big floppa christmas hat pfp with their friends. Will went as far as infiltrating their server with an alt, but all this panic would result in nothing.

Fig5:

This isn’t the first time Will would call his audience unfunny. Which again wouldn’t be an issue if he also wasn’t a fan of fart and toilet humor.

Fig6:

This occurred on multiple occasions in the general chat, the first time the chat was talking about generation loss/ranboo and another the topic of Jerma came up. Keys resolution to topics other than DA coming up was to make these claims, paste the Solitude teasers in chat and state that the chat ‘discusses’; consequently, the chat would die soon after these happened even though solitude is enjoyed by many server members.

Fig7:

It's discouraged to talk about other artists on the server, while there is a music chat some conversations leak out into general (or start there). As seen here, this was interpreted as people claiming other artists were better than DA.

Will’s Unwarranted Trauma Dumps:

It’s important to preface that there's nothing inherently wrong with sharing with your audience how you’re feeling; However, this is taken to a near parasocial extreme in the DA server and to an extent, twitter. There's a stark difference between telling your fans “I'm not feeling well today” and extreme descriptions of traumatic situations, often coming out of the blue. Quite a few times the DA- general chat would be chatting as usual when Will comes in and states something horrible or traumatic. The most recent example of this occurred after a momocon concert. The chat was joking about holograms and the matrix,and Will suddenly comes in about how he was trapped in a fire exit, saying it made him feel claustrophobic and "not real". Another time, people were talking about how they made friends and Will goes into graphic detail about how he was bullied, i.e. head bashing and the like. It’s also heavily encouraged to pay attention to his discord status, as if it's negative, support should be given through DA-love chat. This is not forced, but it's extremely encouraged.

Will says he's horrible fiancé material because he feels like he's mentally immature, it's unclear why he posted this for his entire audience to see.

Fig9:

Here Will talks about getting bullies expelled by recording them and having his dad threaten their parents. I obviously don't know how true this is, but it's very one-sided and shouldn't be used as an example on how to deal with situations like this. It's also highly debatable how true it exactly is, considering in the 90s when he grew up very small recording devices weren’t very good.

Fig10:

I don't know what this person exactly said to Will, but going on a public page to call them out goes a bit far. On top of that, Will weaponises his own traumas here just to argue with a stranger he deems to be greedy and jealous.

Fig11:

This seems to be a reply to someone, I don't know exactly what as it was forwarded to me, but Will once again talks about how bad his life is and how people should feel bad for him. He brings up triggering subjects such as rape without warning as well here which is very odd.

Fig 12:

Here Will says he feels like shit a lot mostly because of personal issues such as not being able to get over an ex, but also the way viewers see his channel, which is a weird thing to mention on a channel account. He also puts it in such a way that it makes the reader feel responsible for his happiness, he has a habit of wording things in this manner a lot.

Fig13:

Here Will brings up the bully story again (see Fig. 9) but it's changed when it comes to how he made them stop. It's also notable that he says that making music is what causes him to get bullied now, making his audience once again feel bad for him.

Fig14:

Will shares a note stating why a stream was canceled saying he had 2 panic attacks, this would be fine, however he also shares a lot of information such as his suicidal feelings and him supposedly losing his house. He also makes a remark on how the audience can keep him alive, once again shifting the weight of his problems to them rather than taking measures himself like not reading the discord or comments.

Fig15:

Will complains about CG5 getting big opportunities saying he stole it from him, this is strange considering Will and Charlie are seemingly friends.

Fig16:

Will says he got a PTSD attack caused by the Suicide Squidward meme and asks people to not show it to him. Why a Spongebob meme is a trigger is unknown.

Will DAGames Ryan @Wil... · 02 Aug 20
It wouldn't matter if I stopped using Twitter because the house is still on fire, and nobody's gonna put it out, so it'll spill to other social media, to a point where pretty much nothing is safe at all.

Fig17:

Yet another example of Will bringing up how tragic his life is without warning or clear reason, again including very heavy topics.

Fig18:

Will brings up his mental disorders and use of substances on twitter because of a qrt-trend.

Fig19:

Will says he cant use twitter anymore because users of the platform thrive off mistakes, causing him PTSD episodes, but when asked why he's still using it despite having said he'd quit several times at that point he says it wouldn't make a difference. It's also interesting to note he now has twitter blue and is basically paying to use a platform he deems toxic.

Neurotransmitters are the very things that keep us thinking, especially about the positives, getting you up and working basically. Because I have PTSD, panic attacks, anxiety, worry, depression, asbergers, and a heavy amount of trauma spanning a decade of malice and abuse towards me? I've stopped altogether, and hence the neurotransmitters have done the same.

Here Will says that because he has a lot of mental issues his neurotransmitters have stopped functioning properly/altogether and thus he can't think about positive topics. Not only is this factually incorrect (if your neurotransmitters stop working you'd be braindead), but it's also strange to say that he's physically unable to think positive thoughts.

Fig21:

Will talks about how a friend wanted to help him play pokemon but that they said they would have done things differently at a lot of choices Will made. Will then went on to call them a cunt. He also says he can't play RPGs because the community has a set idea on how people should play, giving him trauma as a result.

My suicidal tendencies came from (big shock) the construct of violence on social media being mass produced.
The idea that people were literally fighting each other and removing themselves from friend groups because of an opinion
The idea I thought my friends were gonna hate me because I didn't wanna go out in the streets and get killed, all while there's a giant pandemic going around.
That and family and relationship issues
10/08/2020 08:24
Its awful that people thought that you were using this whole thing to gain attention
Will 10/08/2020 08:24
And apparently that in of itself is considered "racist". But you're forgetting, an opinion is not fact. It's a shame fact is being jaded that way.

Fig22:

Will says the FNAF games and community gave him PTSD, rendering him unable to play them. He did go on to play every installment after this statement and released more songs about FNAF.

Fig23:

Everyone remembers the BLM protests from 2020. I fully support these protests, however Will found a way to make it about himself by saying the videos of violence occurring at these protests gave him suicidal tendencies. He also went on to say that friend groups were falling apart cuz of an opinion, the opinion in question being racism.

Fig24:

While talking about how he cannot handle conflict, Will lists his mental disorders, which he has done numerous times. His inability to handle conflict can be seen in the DA-server, often to the extreme. When asked about the specifics of a new rule, he panics and leaves, never fully explaining it. As a result it's never really enforced. (Screenshots of this specific occurrence are missing due to the chat (bunker-room) being deleted)

Fig25:

Will says he doesn't want to use his talks about trauma as dumps and that he wants to show that bad things only made him stronger. This wouldn't be a bad thing if it was true, which it isn't. Will has claimed and shown several times that his struggles make him feel and act weak, and it's also clear that him sharing his mental struggles doesn't seem to be teaching anyone anything, all it does is make them feel sorry for him.

Fig 26:

This is not the first or the last time Will has shared a nightmare of his. However, it’s in this section because of the nature of it. ‘ Nobody cared I died’, what was the expectation of the audience with this being posted to twitter? Were people supposed to go “ we’re so sorry, we would care if you died?”. Furthermore, was this something that needed to be shared with the public at all?

Fig 27:

In this tweet, Will confesses to searching for himself, but if not for fanart, then for what? More than likely negative comments about himself, which are often small tweets with barely any likes, or people mentioning in a context he doesn't like (such as conversation about older work like the fnaf songs). If he gets shit for it, it's because it is unnecessary.

To follow up, I get it should be a lot more about enjoying what I've done than hoping for it's reach, but the reason I'm upset with my burnout is every other nerdcore artist churns out content every single week like it's nothing, but I can't. Makes me feel inferior.

Dude, you're gonna overwork yourself like this, especially with what happened. You said yourself that you can't work like this, and that's okay, but please don't force yourself to do it anyway
Will DAGames Ryan
But how else are we gonna remain in the system man? All these things are things I would agree with in a heartbeat, if it wasn't for the fact that this system is promoted on the idea of "grind or die" mentality. It is literally killing people who take their time, y'know?
Replying to @WillDARyan
You released a song yesterday, it's okay to take a break, especially now. Burning yourself out is not gonna do anything for you but make you feel worse
I gotta agree with ya here man. Yeah the system sucks, but taking your time has had its rewards. People sing their praises for your stuff years after they release because of the quality. Pushing so hard will inevitably lead to an unwanted decline,and mental health really matters
@WillDARyan
The people who pump stuff out, often don't have that, and from what I've seen most mature people don't like the constant content 'pump'. It feels superficial as hell. It's kinda worked so far,at least from what I can see..as your stuff will last in people's minds for a long time

Fig28:

When presented with the option of not overworking himself , and possibly making things easier by purchasing demos and commissioning people to make sections of songs, Will sees this as ‘dirty’. He then continues about how he needs to work to survive, while completely disregarding the possible solutions because it seems ‘wrong’. Most of the fans do wish for wills wellbeing and probably wouldn’t mind a purchased demo or two if it makes his mental health better.

Fig29:

Will attempts to show a graph and its ‘decline’, when in reality there is a very little dip in comparison to the whole graph. He then begins to rant about how he can’t relax because he has to support his family. Despite this, he continues to go against the algorithm (not uploading songs when they would be the most popular), thus causing the views to still be low. RTTML released nearly a year after Poppy chapter 2, and as of now the Cup de grace animation isn’t finished, and cuphead is currently ‘dead’ in terms of relevance (there doesn't seem to be anything cuphead related in general releasing any time soon either). Most recently the Ruin song was released too early (before the game came out) causing it to have little to no relevance to the game.

Fig31:

Will says the channel is dying cuz certain parts of it are broken and tanking, and says that he's just supposed to accept that he's only known for FNAF and Bendy. He then goes on to say he can't work on his original stories because of it, again blaming the audience rather than his inability to stick to a format and trend.

Fig32:

Here Will talks about how he just had a panic attack caused by ptsd. Chat was joking about how British people aren't real when Will comes in saying he never thought he was real anyway, but later says how the panic didn't seem like a simulation, and goes on about how he'll never be enough. It's a very strange change of conversation and shows how everyone in the chat immediately goes to aid him like they've been practically taught to.

Fig33:

Here a fan brings up the topic of CG5, saying how crazy his sudden rise to fame is, saying they need to get the DAGames channel to 2 million subs as well (it didn't have that at the time of conversation). Will comes in saying there's a simple reason why CG5 has more subs than him: he's better than him. While yes he's more popular, this isn't inherently because of talent, but more because of timing with trends and memes and because of the quantity of his content.

General status and power abuse:

A bold claim, but a more than appropriate one. Although it falls into a similar category as audience control, there are quite a few differences. For one, Will has subtly accused fans of copying his work when they weren't. Going as far as sending several of his friends to state that a simple black and white poster someone had made was copying 'Into the Beyond'. Will also has a habit of talking negatively about other artists and their work ethics, most commonly CG5, seemingly demonizing them and trying to undermine their success.

That's because you're addicted to the thought
It's easier to switch off and let the noise noodle into something else. Like again take it from me? Try to not feel bad, especially on my behalf. It's a thing I had to learn real hard. Being obsessed with a thought is super tough chronically and mentally because it stagnates what else we could be doing in the process.
There's a few things I simply had to cut out of my life instead of obsessing. Nerdcore for example. I could be super addicted to feeling alone in the scene because I don't get to talking, buuuuuuut I'd be forgetting about my friends in the process really. Best I got those as well.
Just a fair warning for obsessive thought, from a person who's been there and done it, it's better to move from it and focus on what you can do. Fig34:

When comparing himself to other artists, one of his most prominent examples is CG5 (see fig 33). This is usually in a negative way, saying that his fame isn't fair cuz he (Will) has been active for longer than CG5, and that Charlie's fame mostly comes from simple concepts like memes. This might be true, however it's not a bad thing like Will makes it out to be. It's also strange that he does this since Charlie is his friend and someone he has collaborated with on several occasions.

Fig35:

This convo started with someone asking about what was okay and what wasn't in terms of fanart for IRIS, this devolved into a couple people talking about how the rules are confusing and different from most fanbases, saying they can't do their own thing without getting repercussions for doing so. Will said he felt like people were misinterpreting him and making fun of him and IRIS, which wasn't the case at all because people were trying to show appreciation with art. One artist apologized for unintentionally making him feel bad, he then went on to say they were milking it dry, hence his comment "don't have a cow", and that they were obsessed with certain ideas.

Fig36:

Someone in the server showed a drawing of a solar system made for their original story. Instead of complimenting their art, Will and others came into chat to say how much it reminded them of IRIS's Into The Beyond and made the conversation about that, completely dismissing the artist. While Into the Beyond uses a black and white theming, it's unfair to claim someone doing the same is copying, as Will does not own the concept of black and white posters.

Mistreatment of fans and fan artists:

There's a difference between stating boundaries for one's work and project versus calling fanworks ‘tampering’. The latter seems to be the unfortunate case in the fandom, specifically the DA-server. This is mostly the case when it comes to IRIS related content. To give context, for a while fan interpretations of the characters were allowed, and suddenly they weren’t. This wasn’t the issue though, as the main problem stems from how said fan artists were treated after. Ranging to being upset about ‘incorrect’ character details for characters that had no official design, blaming an artist for ruining how biotides were seen, to flat out calling said fanart and fanfiction as tampering while also faulting them for the story’s hindrance.
Fans are also mistreated, often being told to like other songs Will favors more as opposed to their own opinion, and basically telling them that listening to different musicians is bad and that it’s insulting to him to express that.

Fig37:

In this conversation Will mentions how he feels like he isn't good enough and that he thinks his ideas will never be good enough. He goes as far as saying that he saw comments saying one artist in particular drew Biotide better than his design, however these comments do not exist. It's a strange thing to say and attack one specific person alone, but to lie about it? He also goes on to say that there are artists who are so malicious that they do things they have been told countless times not to and don't admit to it. I don't know what and who he meant with it, so a lot of artists started apologizing for making art that isn't 100% canon, including small details such as style changes. This led to a lot of rule changes, such as a temporary ban on IRIS art altogether and a ban on art that included non-canon ideas. These rules however aren't enforced all too much.

Fig38:

Another example of Will calling fanartists malicious, specifically fanfic writers, going as far as saying they're tampering with his work because they get more responses than his ideas. Again, there's no examples of this happening.

Hey you, filthy Capitalists! We here at DAGames know how much you love to capitalise off everything we do, and I bet you can't wait to sponge off of our hard work by filtering every single instrumental, cancelled work and a Capella, re-uploading every single thing we upload, even if it's absolute horse excrement because you wont let anything stand in between you and a platform, even if it's morally questionable yooou filthy whores ;)
Well look no further, we released a video a while ago called "Songs From A Hat!". Featuring several short bite sized half assed improvised session tracks. Now you too can take the video, put it through YouTube to MP4, shove it in an AI machine and filter the fuck out of it like hot garbage. Be sure to subscribe for more content to sponge from, and stay tuned :D

Fig39:

Here Will talk about how artists have changed certain designs for fanarts by making them more buff and such. However this is vastly exaggerated and not as extreme as he puts it to be. Once again he paints fanartists in a bad light.

Fig40:

A fan states that no fnaf song will ever beat Build Our Machine for them, to which Will responds with the ‘I’ll Make Them Whole’ single cover saying “Isaac Clarke would like a word”, seemingly wanting to make them change their opinion. It’s funny to note that I’ll Make Them Whole is not a fnaf song.

Fig41:

In a community post on the youtube channel, there was a very passive aggressive jab at people who made remixes and instrumentals of DA’s work. While this could’ve been directed at the people who did this excessively, the post was deleted, possibly proving otherwise. It is important to note that many people remake the instrumentals, because many of them aren’t available to the public (aside from the old ones deleted from the computer crash). It’s implied the purpose of the “songs from a hat” video was to give these people something else to work with. Overall, it's unfair to assume people that remix and remake works are always doing it out of malice and for money, and this post did not make the distinction between the people who do it for fun and those who do it excessively. Another note of importance when it comes to this is the fact that a lot of fan videos containing any of Wills songs get copyright claims, so the creators make no money from them.

NEW RULE: Going forwards from now, mashups containing IRIS material will fall under the same rules as remakes or full covers of IRIS material for the time being. This may be subject to change later down the line, but for now any mashups with IRIS material will not be allowed. (This is to say that any mashup with an IRIS song in general is not allowed. Whether it's the full song or just a single track doesn't matter, neither are allowed). (edited)

Hey, @Mod Squad, got a question regarding this channel.
Would OCs in IRIS getup count as going against the rules? Asking because I have an OC who's a fan of the DAOnline ecosystem and I wanted to draw an "album cover" of my OCs based on the universe their favorite songs come from.
Sorry for asking and crossing boundaries, if I do so.

Help?
Yesterday at 11:18 PM
I would advise against it honestly. This to me would fall under fanfiction/fan interpretation stuff and while ya deffo can draw it if ya like, probs best not to post it in here. My word aint gospel of course but would say drawing OCs in IRIS getup would be toeing the line.
Yesterday at 11
100%. I'll keep it to myself.

Fig42:

This isn't the first server rule specifically for IRIS fanart has been made, far from it. I'm not gonna share them all, however the way this rule is described should give an indication of how vague IRIS rules usually are, making them hard to follow for artists, resulting in a lot of discourse about said rules wrestling in Will mistreating artists even more. It’s a vicious cycle.

Fig43:

Here we see a direct result of the vague fanart rules, specifically to the fan-interpretation rule. This rule was established earlier this year and was supposed to ensure artists stick to the source material. The strictness of it has been pushed to an extreme though.

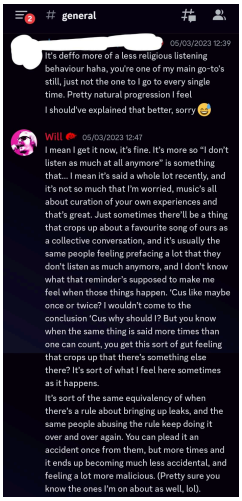
I gotta admit, I've been listening to your stuff a little less cuz I was in a very negative rut I needed to get out of, so I listened to more confidence boosters, and I think that's okay
Been a lot of lady gaga and Ghost
Will 05/03/2023 12:22
S'fine
05/03/2023 12:23
Still like your stuff dw haha
Dont take it personal man, I know you tend to do that sometimes
Will 05/03/2023 12:31
I mean the thing is I've heard you say that about 5 times now in a short span of time, and it's starting to feel less of an observation and more of a rub in now.
So while I appreciate I don't need to take it personally? I've also heard it a whooooole lot already y'see
05/03/2023 12:32
Oh no it's more so that I went from diehard everyday listener to just having ya in my regular playlist
But I get where youre coming from
You're in most of my main playlists still dw
Just checked, in all of em actually, gg dude



general
05/03/2023 12:39
It's deffo more of a less religious listening behaviour haha, you're one of my main go-to's still, just not the one to go to every single time. Pretty natural progression I feel
I should've explained that better, sorry
Will 05/03/2023 12:47
I mean I get it now, it's fine. It's more so "I don't listen as much at all anymore" is something that... I mean it's said a whole lot recently, and it's not so much that I'm worried, music's all about curation of your own experiences and that's great. Just sometimes there'll be a thing that crops up about a favourite song of ours as a collective conversation, and it's usually the same people feeling prefacing a lot that they don't listen as much anymore, and I don't know what that reminder's supposed to make me feel when those things happen. 'Cus like maybe once or twice? I wouldn't come to the conclusion 'Cus why should I? But you know when the same thing is said more times than one can count, you get this sort of gut feeling that crops up that there's something else there? It's sort of what I feel here sometimes as it happens.
It's sort of the same equivalency of when there's a rule about bringing up leaks, and the same people abusing the rule keep doing it over and over again. You can plead it an accident once from them, but more times and it ends up becoming much less accidental, and feeling a lot more malicious. (Pretty sure you know the ones I'm on about as well, lol).

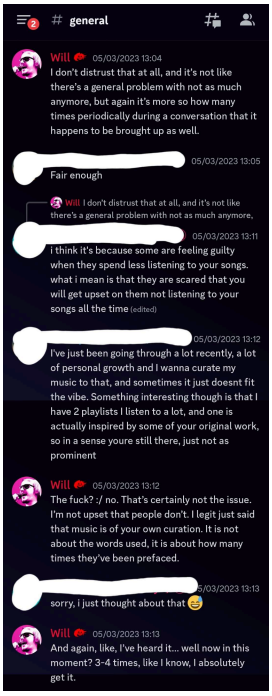
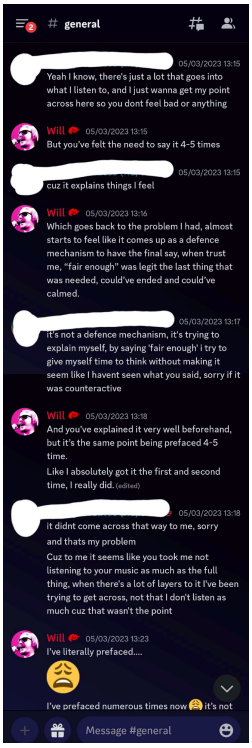
05/03/2023 12:50
I get that, I can't speak for everyone of course, but for me it's more that you were the gateway to metal, so when I'm listening to my metal playlist, it's more than just you and like maybe 2 bands now haha. Dw I never say those things out of malice, there's always a reason for it that explains it better
And 'not as much' is very different from 'not at all', please try to remember that
Will 05/03/2023 12:56
Now see that second thing is a whole different subject, but it sort of holds the same gut feeling. Dunno about anyone else, but I've had a few gut instincts crop up lately and it's usually about the same things.
1. Total contrarianism
2. Repetitive wording
3. Repetitive actions
Contrarianism in a way that sometimes with a few people they never speak to me to agree with me, they only open up when they disagree with me, which gives me the gut feeling of "You really don't like me at all".
Then the repeated prefacing in that degree as well, (it's definitely not as severe, trust lol). Doesn't hold the same argument, but more so like "R-right okay well I've... Okay I've definitely heard it said more times than I can count now... Should I start feeling something here?".
And the repeated action in the form of leaks being brought up. Gets under my skin if they've been told several times to calm it down but they don't stop. I think that goes for most scenarios though, if you've told a kid to stop punching a wall, and they do it three times, the wall caves in eventually (has to be a pretty weak wall to do that, OR the kid's a super saiyan, but you get the gist heh)
05/03/2023 12:57
Thats fair yea
Just trust, for me listening less is more about the fact that I'm not as crazy obsessed about your stuff as I was as a 15 year old haha. It would be really uncomfortable if I still was while we're friends to the point where it could be toxic or just a shit friendship. I still fucking love your stuff and really like your songs, believe me, just that I dont listen to it every chance I get anymore
I feel like when I say I dont listen to your stuff as much anymore, it's very important to keep that in mind
For myself as well that is



general
Will 05/03/2023 13:04
I don't distrust that at all, and it's not like there's a general problem with not as much anymore, but again it's more so how many times periodically during a conversation that it happens to be brought up as well.
05/03/2023 13:05
Fair enough
Will I don't distrust that at all, and it's not like there's a general problem with not as much anymore,
05/03/2023 13:11
I think it's because some are feeling guilty when they spend less listening to your songs. what i mean is that they are scared that you will get upset on them not listening to your songs all the time (edited)
05/03/2023 13:12
I've just been going through a lot recently, a lot of personal growth and I wanna curate my music to that, and sometimes it just doesnt fit the vibe. Something interesting though is that I have 2 playlists I listen to a lot, and one is actually inspired by some of your original work, so in a sense youre still there, just not as prominent
Will 05/03/2023 13:12
The fuck? :/ no. That's certainly not the issue. I'm not upset that people don't. I legit just said that music is of your own curation. It is not about the words used, it is about how many times they've been prefaced.
05/03/2023 13:13
sorry, i just thought about that
Will 05/03/2023 13:13
And again, like, I've heard it... well now in this moment? 3-4 times, like I know, I absolutely get it.



general
05/03/2023 13:15
Yeah I know, there's just a lot that goes into what I listen to, and I just wanna get my point across here so you dont feel bad or anything
Will 05/03/2023 13:15
But you've felt the need to say it 4-5 times
05/03/2023 13:15
cuz it explains things I feel
Will 05/03/2023 13:16
Which goes back to the problem I had, almost starts to feel like it comes up as a defence mechanism to have the final say, when trust me, "fair enough" was legit the last thing that was needed, could've ended and could've calmed.
05/03/2023 13:17
it's not a defence mechanism, it's trying to explain myself, by saying 'fair enough' i try to give myself time to think without making it seem like I havent seen what you said, sorry if it was counteractive
Will 05/03/2023 13:18
And you've explained it very well beforehand, but it's the same point being prefaced 4-5 time.
Like I absolutely got it the first and second time, I really did. (edited) 05/03/2023 13:18
it didnt come across that way to me, sorry and thats my problem
Cuz to me it seems like you took me not listening to your music as much as the full thing, when there's a lot of layers to it I've been trying to get across, not that I don't listen as much cuz that wasn't the point
Will 05/03/2023 13:23
I've literally prefaced....
I've prefaced numerous times now it's not

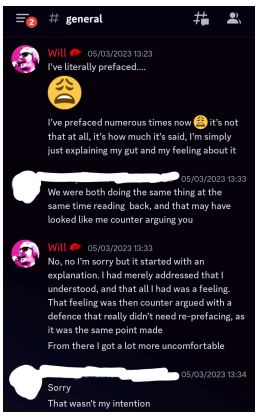

Fig44:

Here a fan brings up the topic of listening to different, more positive musicians more to help with their mental health. Will responds in a very passive aggressive fashion saying that they've been saying it too much, and even when they say it's a change from listening 24/7 to just the occasional playlist shuffle, he says that mentioning a decrease in streams is as bad as mentioning leaks. After this he goes on a rant about contrarianism and repetition comparing it to leaks several times again. The fan then explains why they haven't been listening as much and has very good reasons as to why. Will responds to this saying that their explanation only makes things worse, saying they're using defense mechanisms and counter arguing. The conversation ends with the fan apologizing.

This situation shows how controlling Will can be of people's thought patterns and of conversation to a strange extent, and how he puts words in people's mouths.

Emotional manipulation:

There are several examples of Will's less than subtle ways of telling people to think and feel different, usually to paint himself as a victim. When it came to the fanart, he claimed seeing it gave him anxiety, and confidence issues about his work. Causing many of the Fan-artists in the server to apologize. (this specific example is seen more in the Mistreatment of fan artists and fans chapter.) Maybe the biggest example of Will's manipulation of people is one we'll refer to as 'the Brownie situation'. Christopher Brown, aka 'Brownie' used to be a team member of the DAGames channel up until late 2015 when Will fired him for unclear reasons besides him not finishing a video on time. After his departure Will started painting him in a bad light claiming Brownie started backstabbing him and posting negatively about him. A rather heated facebook argument shows that the facts are different than Will told people: Brownie left his job to work full-time for DAGames only to be fired from the channel, and when he tried to go back to his job and wasn't taken back he got upset and posted about it on facebook, not even mentioning Will or the channel. When Will came in to argue his side, Brownie asked him to step back several times, and even when he didn't Brownie never said anything negative about Will as a person despite Will claiming he did, the only thing Brownie said about him and the team is that they took away his dream. However Will has gone out of his way to paint Brownie in a bad light even today, why he still does this is unknown.

2020: MEMES ARE SO COOL
2010: These memes are so dated
2020: Okay Boomer!
2010: I don't believe it, this generation was the best
2000: You think yours was the best, you haven#t heard My Chemical Romance!
2010: Whatever, boomer
2000: I- I don't understand, My Chemical Romance was the shit
1990: No, completely wrong, Spice girls was life!
2000: Okay boomer
1990: What? Our time went through a lot of suffering for that band
1980: YOU THINK THAT'S BAD! We had to deal with a generation that basically did nothing!
1990: Shut up, boomer
1980: I seriously don't understand, We went through a lot of suffering
1940: WE HAD A FUCKING WAR YOU INCONSIDERATE SWINE!
1980: Shut up, Boomer
So on, and so forth
2020 is DEFINITELY gonna give you the same treatment
You will eventually be a washed up generation with outdated philosophies.
Point in all of this? Every generation had their difficulty, it's about understanding each other and learning to bond with each other in a concise way that fits every generation

Fig 45:

Will tells Chloe to fuck off cuz he's not seeking attention but venting. We don't know exactly what they said cuz their tweet was deleted, but we can presume they were offering help/answers.

Fig 46:

Here Will talks about how every generation thinks they're the best, how the generation before it disagrees saying they are, and the first generation saying "okay boomer" to them in an attempt to show how every generation's culture will essentially be forgotten. Not only is this speech nonsensical, it also takes a very inconsiderate turn towards WWII.

CEX is taking Christmas vacancies, and even then the beauty of those is if you can show them your talents and know how in the media, they normally take them on fuilly 😮

Hey Chris. I see you trying to be like all your favorite heroes and take this on alone. But in this scenario, You should take the help from your friends. Your friends are here and offering you chances in which you turn down. You should take a chance and run with them on this one. You may not regret it 🙂 In times like this, use your friends and be happy you have them around.

The thing is we didn't tell him to leave and just not look for another part time job. We encouraged him to do that since he was asking if it was a stupid idea just coming off of a job fully. Yes, it was a stupid idea, but we gave him advice to take on another part time job in the meantime. No offense dude but when you post depressing statuses online literally asking for help and then getting the help and completely dismissing it... It really doesn't do you justice 😐

Will DAgames Ryan I don't know you but I'm pretty sure you are one of the people he is mad at so I mean no offence by this comment but I doubt he will listen to you and chances are anything you say will just make Chris angry so I say this with the utmost respect but maybe step back

That's fair enough, just know that he's hating us for all of the wrong reasons. We gave him our life. We gave him far more than a friend would ever offer... We don't just sit back and let the guy work without help, we gave him everything he wanted to better his channel. The fact Chris that you weren't pulling the work out made us come to that decision. We don't give £400 month to someone who's not working for much. That would go for anyone else who wouldn't do the work we asked for.

Will...i tried to get the fucking videos working for 2 weeks....only before that meeting did i get it working... so no offense but you, chloe and Kot...you said you dont want me on the channel. you want to help me...then no offense but the only way i want help from you...is to leave me alone. You gave my channel a push....fine. But right now, i dont have any reason to continue...no job now...and you guys are living it up. you guys have the world at your feet and im left down here now. You guys have problems....fine...sorry i thought otherwise...but considering i have nothing to bring me money or even my dream to keep going.....all i have is a fiancee on the other side of the ocean, who i dont have the fucking leasure of seeing unlike you and kot. But honestly...im gonna be blunt and say this...fuck dagames....you gave me the chance and maybe i could've done more...but seeing as this 'friend' was now kicked out the channel without a chance to prove this and get things up now.....

If you're looking for advice from a video game perspective Chris we all have dreams, the only thing that's important to us is achieving those. You know I have a lot of respect for you and we know you took a leap of faith, but you had to believe in your talents to do it and you need to believe to carry on.
Once upon a time I was pretty popular on twitch as a moderator/admin to people of all kinds of games, the one thing people look for in the people they watch is passion. Don't think of it as a job, don't think on the numbers on the screen. Focus on personal satisfaction, never weigh your successes against others, you'll always find yourself wanting more.
Work on getting a stable job/ income, then decide on what you want to do with gaming. It takes years, effort and investment. And you might not make it, but you should go for it. If you ever want any help Im personally pretty clues about LP's.
And the thing with DAgames was business, don't take it personally
We'll get you there man.
7 y
William Alexander Ryan
I agree with Jackie on your talents and your passions, this is advise you should follow
Though just a thought for everyone, DAGames doesn't focus itself around business at all, don't know where that phrase keeps coming from, but we seriously love our fans and want to do everything we can for them, supplying videos, livestreams, songs, things that get them up on a morning and be happy to see. I'm happy say we have that following, but when it came to input, Chris wasn't able to supply. But the thing is with DAgames it sky rocketed too fast that hardly anyone was able to keep up with it. Sometimes things need to be taken slowly and effectively. We have full faith in you Brownie, and let's just say we'll never ever be leaving out, and the fans haven't forgotten you either

Fig 47:

Brownie is a former member of DA that was let off on seemingly negative means. Numerous times he is brought up but often in a negative light, with a taste of curiosity I dug to see what really happened. From these facebook posts we can see that he was let go after his computer broke down. If that wasn't bad enough, he was told to quit his job in order to work for DA full time, but when he was let go, his job wouldn't take him back. One might be wondering how brownie fits into the doc. It isn't really because of him per say, it was Will's and Chloe's behavior to him. It marks nearly the earliest record of will giving horrible advice, being selfish , and just overall a shitty person. I want to believe he changed, but this many years of the same behavior over and over… he hasn't.

Disregard of safety and oversharing private info:

Taking risks and sharing your personal life to a certain degree isn't necessarily a bad thing, but it can most definitely go too far. A prime example is the facebook account he has created for his daughter before she was born and continually sharing her full name and photos of her since she was a baby. He has also shared his and his family's location numerous times, going as far as having the coordinates of his old home in an old twitter account, but also sharing what theme park he is at on a family vacation. A massive example of disregarding the safety of others was when at NPC 2023 he was told to not start a wall of death due to two pillars in the middle of the venue, and telling the discord server that he'd figure something out, fully knowing that people could and would get injured. On the contrary, he would state that crowd surfing is dangerous, and he wants to be safe, even though he teased doing a circle pit and a wall of death multiple times. Wall of death being when 2 sides of the crowd separate and collide. His argument for people not wanting to participate was saying they could either be on the balcony or on the sides. Thankfully a crowd wave was done as a safer alternative, although this is from videos i've seen, and I don't see anyone who attended talk about a wall of death occurring.

Fig 48:

Jessica's facebook: since at least her infancy, a facebook under Jessica's name, Will's daughter, has existed, presumably either made by Will, or made with his permission. It contains a lot of photos, her full name, her place of residency, and other infringing information about her, which is very concerning since she's still a minor.

Fig 49:

Will's old twitter account, which is the past equivalent of the current DAGames twitter account, holds a lot of private content such as pictures of his family and his child as a baby, and a location in the bio that is a house. I don't know if this is his old address which would be his mother's house.

Fig 50:

Will here says he keeps a lot of things private, especially regarding his daughter. As proven in this chapter that is not correct.

Fig 51:

Another instance of Will sharing his child's full name.

Okay so It has been brought to my attention that there are three names (not gonna name them), who have been abusing our mod (again no name but I'm pretty sure you know who you guys are), calling out that because of age they shouldn't be allowed. Time and time again I can't believe I have to keep mentioning this, but mods are placed NOT on age, but maturity. Imagine if we took on a 41 year old who acted 5, and a 12 year old who acts "26"? Well lemme tell you that HAS happened, and WILL happen periodically, not in this server, but life itself. It is NOT about age, it is indeed about the level of maturity. Now, to the abusers who call out about he fact that this mod is 12 and you call the mod out to be 2... Have you fucking seen who I am? I'm 24 and still act young enough to be "in school", but guess what? People love that about the channel, and I'm pretty sure that every once in a while the abusers have also intentionally acted younger than their age at some point because it's fun, it's eccentric, it's just a common reflex, we all act like we're freaking enjoying ourselves without a gain or a loss, and that's what this community is founded on. Learn to respect this, or you will be kicked, you have been warned, and trust me, I have a recording of footage for proof of you want to try and tell me you didn't do it. Cut our mods some slack and don't drill them just because they're doing what you all sometimes wanna do every now and then. Okay? We good? Good, end of story (edited)

Will 18/07/2016 06:19
But see? I called your age out higher, You'd think that kinda stands out as older than your age right?
[redacted] 18/07/2016 06:20
Yeah...
Will 18/07/2016 06:20
Because you are more mature. You're another great mod that lets loose every now and then, I mean for fuck sake, it's okay to do that every now and then (edited)

Fig 53:

Mosh pit plans: Will talked about having either a circle pit or a wall of death at the NPC 2023 concert, in this screenshot he lets the server know he has been advised not to due to two giant poles in the middle of the concert audience floor. He says he won't let that stop him after someone comments there will be kids at the show. Apparently nothing happened, but people would have seriously gotten hurt if it did.

Fig 54:

This is particularly concerning, here we can see Will picked mods out of maturity instead of age, which to cut to the chase, was a horrendous idea. There are plenty of people who are 18 and older who can reach the requirements he wants. The most shocking part about this is that the former mod in question breaks discord TOS by being under 13. And instead of de-modding them , or even kicking them, they are told “you’re mature for your age”. What is the most saddening is that it seems no one else contested this idea, and it still happened years later. One of the more modern mods of DA turned 18 this year… while being mod for several years before that. Will even mentions in this pic that some people have been abusing the younger mods, which is a lot of stress to put a child through. The fact this still technically happens and that no one else on DA thought this was a bad idea is just unacceptable and abhorrent.

Ableism, sexism, racism, victim blaming, use of slurs:

The use of slurs, mostly the n-word, is not new to the DA-fandom. Quite recently, as of 2 years ago, old tweets appeared of him using it. It needs to be made clear that it doesn't matter how old the tweets or vines were, nor that it was a 'different time'. It's unacceptable, and the fandom's laissez-faire attitude towards the resurfaced tweets is unacceptable as well. Somewhat racist depictions of Asians still exist on the channel in the video,'Playstation, analog not included'. While impersonating an accent for parody isn't inherently racist, it can't be ignored that the japanese salesman is coloured with yellow skin and has buck teeth. This video wasn't created during the newgrounds days/ the early 2000's, it was made 4 years ago.

Fig 61:

Here Will talks very casually about how he left twitter after seeing SA allegations about a voice actor, saying that people were addicted to the discourse about it and that they should just go to the law, which is a very common thing said to victims of SA by a famous person. When Jonathan Young tells him his comments are in poor taste he doesn't see why and partially makes the conversation about him.

Fig 62:

Here Will talks about his hatred for cancel culture saying that people should look at the other side too. He mentions James Charles here, who was canceled for having relations with a minor boy. Not only that, but he also that people shouldn't always believe the victim, and that people call anything rape these days. He then follows these claims saying he doesn't condone SA and that he isn't being insensitive, we know at least one of those claims is incorrect.

Will hasn’t used slurs outside of the n-word in videos as far as I'm aware (big chance they're in jackbox/quiplash streams though), however he does use them on discord and very sparingly on twitter. Most notably is his very much intended as insulting use of the f-slur. He also condones his friends using them as such, which was a given since he's okay with people saying the n-word in private too. He also somehow uses outdated terms a lot, such as aspergers and transsexuals.

He made this comment when someone joked that he got the worst fate of all, being white, cis and british. It's very strange and leans into white supremacist ideas. This of course is a stretch, but it matches his patterns.

While some of us have our brains wired differently, it's VERY important to understand where I'm coming from Meme culture started populating DRASTICALLY over the past 5 years. In those 5 years, we now have a new generation gap.

Well she's still sorta in bed and not really dragging me out.
Kinds just waiting on her to insist on getting ready.
But her ADHD kicked in.
So now she's in another world, lol.

Fig 70-71:

ADHD talks: In one image, Will can be seen asking his audience how many of them have ADHD, then proceeds to ask them “who likes memes?”. When people responded ‘yes’, the then claims to have called them out over ‘impulsive responses’, and claims there's a correlation between ADHD and meme culture. Seemingly seeing blaming the change in memes from ADHD. correlation is not causation, and it’s absurd to claim research based on a few people on discord. Even here, what ‘impulsive responses” did he mean? Were people not to respond right away? Will has claimed to do audience research, and if this is what he means, then it can be assured his research is faulty.

On another note, it’s no secret Inutresh has ADHD, but Will here can be seen making comments such as “your adhd is showing”, and “her adhd has kicked in”. It’s also interesting to note that he wanted to do something, and Inu got distracted, but instead of helping her/guiding her, he complained about it in discord. Please note, we are not claiming to feel Inus feelings for her, these are just general observations of overall insensitive behavior.

Fig 72-73:

Will shares an image of Kermit dressed as Hitler and of Hitler performing the Nazi-salute in a Pokemon setting. This is very insensitive and not funny under any circumstances.

Porn, NSFW and lolicon:

Everyone knows that there are minors in the DAGames audience and it’s well known that Will has a 12 year old daughter of his own, however he still consumes it a lot and talks about NSFW subjects to his fans in several videos and tweets, mostly pertaining to him owning dildos. Consuming NSFW content is fine, but when it puts others at risk by doing so in a discord server accessible to minors it becomes a problem. The DAGames server used to have a NSFW chat and a bot with a R34 function which have both been removed, but DAGames member Aficionados Chris’s publicly accessible server does have a NSFW chat. Looking through this chat not only shows how normalized porn is amongst the DAGames team and Will’s friends, but also that Will consumes lolicon and NSFW art pertaining to characters who are minors, such as Blue the dog who in the show is 5 years old, several My Hero Academia characters who are all around 15 years old, Sonic characters who are also children, and Circus Baby from Five NIghts At Freddy’s Sister Location who is possessed by a child and thus considered a minor by the FNAF fandom, and other characters that have childlike characteristics that I don't know.

The most troubling of these, is the presence of a character made by Japanese lolicon artist Zankuro. They (the artist) is entirely Japanese and is difficult to find, however, the tags associated with their works include loli, and lolis with big chests , and general underaged content. It cannot be argued that this character is a short stack because of the artist and the body type is that of a child.

https://twitter.com/DAGamesOfficial/status/976012623157358593?t=-dElrmD7Krlre4kVI6tHDA&s=19 (dildo vine) IS THERE REALLY SUCH THING AS EVIL? at 15 mins Will talks about having dildos etc.

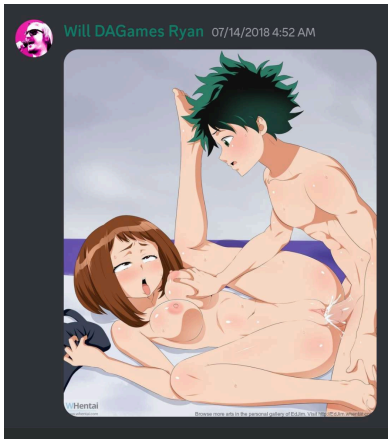

Fig 74:

Will shares that he owns dildos with his audience of mainly minors, saying he thinks there's a pleasure behind them. He goes as far as showing one in a vine on twitter.

Fig 75:

The character displayed here belongs to the artist Zankuro, who draws exclusively loli. The tags shown here show what he's known for:

As mentioned earlier, Zankuro posts in just Japanese, meaning it's difficult to find him through English sites. The character shown (Henrietta) is very clearly child-like and not even remotely close to a short-stack. Viewing loli and other fictional depictions of children in indecent ways is illegal in the Uk under "Protection of Children Act 1978 -1988" and it can be punishable by 5-10 years maximum in prison.

Fig 76:

The character depicted here is 'Blue' from the show 'Blue's Clues'. Blue is implied to be the equivalent of a 5 yr child according to the showrunners. Yet here there's an 'aged up' version for pornography reasons. Aging up a character that's so young is seen as gross and disgusting to many people (as seen when people age up fnaf characters like Gregory for porn).

Fig 77:

It could be argued that the characters depicted here could be someone's OC's and could be of legal age. However, their physique is very childlike.

Fig 78: As of 2023, Deku is 16 years old, many of the students in MHA are minors under 18.

Fig 79: This image is just disgusting, why would someone make a joke out of child abuse and incest and use a real photo for it. Vile.

	 DAGames @DAGamesOfficial Follow Tried drawing myself as a female character to test out facial blemishes and my own style etc... Don't @ rule34 me x,3 Nah JK, do what ya want xD But lemme know how I did :) 23:19 · 05 Nov 18

Fig 80: (The same reasoning as mentioned in fig 78.)

Fig 81: Circus Baby is regarded as a child by the FNAF community because she is possessed by a child.

Fig 82:

Sonic the Hedgehog is 15 years old, Amy Rose is 12 years old.

Fig 83: Another image of Zankuros character ‘Henretta’, which is a loli as addressed earlier.

Fig 84: After drawing a female version of himself, Will would imply that he wouldn’t mind if people drew NSFW of it. His fanbase is still mostly minors, and there wasn’t a tag made for the hypothetical NSFW.

Conclusion:

As mentioned before, I do not intend malice nor slander. I do not hate the community as a whole, but rather it was led by a person very clearly not in the position to do so. I wanted to believe Will has changed, that he's gotten better to a certain degree, but he hasn't. Nothing has changed, and the fandom deserves better. Unfortunately, aspects such as letting minors into mod roles and viewing illegal content (loli is illegal in the uk), was just the final straw. I cannot control what happens now, all I can do is simply put that information out there.
